Summary of programme aims

This is a cross-disciplinary programme which aims to provide students with subject-specific knowledge of both International Relations and English. The joint degree seeks to impart knowledge of a variety of different kinds of literary texts, thereby providing a perspective on different methods of critical analysis. In International Relations, the programme aims to give students an appreciation of the normative, methodological and institutional issues involved in the study of this subfield of Politics and International Relations. The course also aims to foster an independent approach to formulating problems and arguments, using the systematic research, close reading and analytical skills that are fundamental to both disciplines.

Transferable skills

During the course of their studies at Reading, all students will be expected to enhance their academic and personal transferable skills in line with the University's Strategy for Learning and Teaching. In following this programme, students will have had the opportunity to develop such skills, in particular relating to communication, interpersonal skills, learning skills, numeracy, self-management, use of IT and problem-solving, and will have been encouraged to further develop and enhance the full set of skills through a variety of opportunities available outside their curriculum.

International Relations and English are disciplines that lend themselves to critical judgement and problem-solving, both through personal engagement with issues and through dialogue and groups discussion. Students are encouraged to defend and to challenge established positions through the collection, collation and analysis of substantial quantities of material, the rigour of argument, and effective communication and presentation. The disciplines also prompt an awareness of numeracy through chronology, periodisation, and basic quantification. The programme develops students' familiarity with information technology in the production and presentation of their work and develops their skills in using computers for the location and retrieval of bibliographic and source material, accessing sophisticated databases and exploiting the internet.

In addition, students will develop a range of intellectual skills including the ability to synthesise, analyse and evaluate information and ideas; the ability to formulate independent arguments and to appraise and improve their own performance; and the ability to translate subject-specific knowledge and skills to new environments.

Programme content

Each Part of the degree programme comprises 120 credits. At Part 1, students are required to take 60 credits in the School of English and American Literature, and 60 credits in the Department of Politics and International Relations. In Part 2, students must normally take 60 credits in both International Relations and English. In Part 3, students take 40 credits in each subject plus a compulsory 40-credit Dissertation in English or International Relations or a Joint Dissertation drawing on both subjects. However, in consultation with their programme adviser, in either Part 2 or Part 3 students may choose to take up to 20 credits from modules elsewhere in the University.

Progression requirements

To proceed from Part 1 to Part 2, a Joint Honours student must obtain (i) an overall average of 40% over 120 credits taken in Part 1, where all the credits are at C level or above; (ii) a mark of at least 40% in each English module; (iii) a mark of at least 30% in individual modules amounting to not less than 100 credits taken in Part 1

To proceed from Part 1 to Part 2, a Joint Honours student must obtain 1. an overall average of 40% over 120 credits taken in Part 1, where all the credits are at C level or above; 2. a mark of at least 40% in each English module; (iii) a mark of at least 30% in individual modules amounting to not less than 100 credits taken in Part 1.

To proceed from Part 2 to Part 3, students must obtain 1. an overall average of 40% over 120 credits taken in Part 2; 2. an average of 40% across English Part 2 modules; 3. a mark of at least 30% in individual modules amounting to not less than 100 credits taken in Part 2.

Summary of teaching and assessment

In English, teaching is through seminars, lectures and essay tutorials. In Politics and International Relations, Part One modules and the compulsory Part Two modules involve both lectures and seminars. Part Two and Three optional modules typically place greater emphasis on seminars. In addition, the Joint Dissertation module is supported by workshops and individual supervisions in both departments.

In International Relations, Part 1 modules are assessed by a mixture of coursework (40%) and examination (60%). All Part 2 and Part 3 modules other than the Study of Politics and the Joint Dissertation are assessed by a mixture of coursework (25%) and examination (75%). Over the programme as a whole, assessment will be conducted through a mixture of assessed essays and formal examination. Conventions for degree classification are included in the Programme Handbook, but you should note that weighting between Part 2 and Part 3 for classification purposes is 33% and 67%.

Admission requirements

A previous qualification in Politics is not required. Entrants to the Joint Degree programme are normally required to have obtained:

UCAS Tariff: either 300 points from three A2s, including 100 points (grade B) in English Literature or English Language and Literature; or 320 points from 3 A2s + up to two AS, including 100 points (grade B) in English Literature or English Language and Literature

Scottish Highers ABBBB or above (A in English Literature)

Irish Highers at least ABBBB (A in English Literature)

International Baccalaureate 31 points with 6 or 7 for Higher level English Literature

GCSE/O: English Language preferred, grade C or above.

All applications are considered on their individual merits. Mature candidates will be usually be expected to have a B (100 points) at A level English, or equivalent qualification, but consideration is also given to applicants with other qualifications and experience.

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers, and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4,000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@il) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Personal Tutors, School Senior Tutors, the Students' Union, the Medical Practice and the Student Services Centre. The Student Services Centre is housed in the Carrington Building and includes the Careers Advisory Service, the Disability Advisory Service, Accommodation Advisory Team, Student Financial Support, Counselling and Study Advisors. Student Services has a Helpdesk available for enquiries made in person or online, or by calling the central enquiry number on (0118) 378 5555. Students can get key information and guidance from the team of Helpdesk Advisers, or make an appointment with a specialist adviser; Student Services also offer drop-in sessions on everything from accommodation to finance. The Carrington Building is open between 8:30 and 17:30 Monday to Thursday (17:00 Friday and during vacation periods). Further information can be found in the Student Diary (given to students at enrolment) or on the Student website.

The Department of English and American Literature also offers students specific help to improve and develop their essay writing skills through the Royal Literary Fund Fellowship scheme, which provides a resident professional writer whose role is to advise students individually, from first-year to postgraduate level, on raising the level of their academic writing.

Students of both English and Politics and International Relations receive Handbooks which give details of the Programme, guidance on study skills such as note-taking and essay writing, and information about staff, facilities, and sources of specialised help within the University, such as the Study Skills Advisor and the Counselling Service. The English programme is designed to give students extensive teaching support in Part 1 leading to more independent work in Part 3. The Politics and International Relations programme lays increasing emphasis on options and course work over the three years. Academic feedback and guidance is given through one-to-one essay tutorials, and academic and personal support is provided through the tutor system and the University's Personal and Academic Record (PAR) Scheme. Dissertation workshops prepare students for the Part 3 dissertation which is individually supervised. The Geoffrey Matthews Collection, housed in the Department of English and American Literature, provides books, xeroxed materials, cassettes and an extensive collection of videos for loan to students. A video-viewing suite is available within the Faculty. The Library is well stocked with printed materials as well as electronic databases, such as the OED, the MLA Bibliography, and JSTOR. Specialist subject librarians are available to give students advice and guidance to library resources. The Department of Politics provides additional support in the Study of Politics module in Part Two. There is also written feedback on essay work. In addition, Politics and International Relations students have access to a departmental Library, and a photocopier.

Career prospects

A Reading degree in English and International Relations provides graduates with a range of communication and analytical skills that stand them in good stead in the market place. In recent years graduates with qualifications in these subjects have gone into a wide variety of jobs, including teaching, publishing, journalism, the media, management, administration, and public relations. A sizeable minority follow careers in accountancy, banking or commerce, and the civil service; others have pursued interests in law. A number of graduates each year go on to further academic study and research. International Relations students also go into careers involving overseas appointments such as government organisations, including the armed forces, and in non-governmental organisations such as development charities and international businesses. A number of graduates each year go on to further academic study and research. In addition to the help provided by the University Careers Advisory Service, the Department of English and American Literature has a Careers Tutor available to advise students in English on researching and planning their career choices.

Programme Outcomes

Knowledge and Understanding

A. Knowledge and understanding of:

In English:
 Literary texts in English from selected periods between the Middle Ages and the present day
 A range of kinds of texts including fiction, poetry and drama
 Methods of critical textual analysis
 Ways in which social, cultural and historical issues relate to texts
 A range of approaches in English studies
 Selected special fields of English.
 In Politics and International Relations:
 The fundamental concepts of Political Theory and major texts from the Greeks to the present time;
 The comparative analysis of government institutions, political movement and the social bases of politics;
 The various approaches to the study of Modern International Relations;
 A range of selected specialised subjects within the fields of Political Theory, Comparative Government and International Relations.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

In English, knowledge and understanding are gained through formal teaching (lectures, seminar discussions, and individual essay feedback), prescribed and recommended reading, and the writing of essays and a dissertation. Part 1 modules offer a broad introduction to items 1-5. In Part 2, the understanding and skills acquired at Part 1 are developed with particular emphasis on 1, 2 and 4 through seminars, lectures and individual feedback. Part 3 introduces more specialized study, particularly in relation to 3, 5 and 6, through a choice of seminar-based modules together with supervised, independent study leading to a Joint Dissertation.

Assessment

At Parts 1 and 2, knowledge and understanding of 1 - 5 are tested through a combination of essays and unseen written examinations. At Part 3, assessment is through a mixture of methods, such as extended essays, essays plus unseen exams, and the dissertation.

In Politics and International Relations, knowledge and understanding are gained through formal teaching (lectures, seminar discussions, and individual essay feedback), prescribed and recommended reading, and the writing of essays and the Joint Dissertation. In Part 1 and Part 2 students attend both lectures and seminars and in Part 3 most teaching is through seminars.

Assessment

Most knowledge is tested through a combination of coursework and formal examination. Dissertations and oral presentations also contribute.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

Intellectual skills in English are acquired through independent reading (1), seminar preparation and discussion, and essay writing (1, 2, 3) and essay feedback through tutorials (2, 3 and 4).

In Politics, the methods and strategies in the previous section are used, plus the facilitation of self-directed learning through the use of research-based teaching materials and methods, and logical exercises. Essay, portfolio, and dissertation preparation reinforce the research and analytical skills necessary to form and to validate arguments and judgements. The ability to think logically is essential to the understanding and analysis of the discipline. Analysis requires an appreciation of the issues and results in organisation of written work and oral presentations. Students are encouraged to link core and optional modules and also to use experience from modules in the Joint Dissertation.

Assessment

In English, 1 - 5 are assessed both formatively (in seminar discussion, coursework essays, essay feedback and tutorials) and summatively, in essays, unseen exams and the Joint Dissertation.

In Politics and International Relations, assessment of 6 - 15 is carried on through coursework, written unseen examinations, seminar presentations, and discussion in supervisor-led small groups and seminars.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

1 - 3 and 6 are developed in English seminars, essays and essay tutorials. 4 and 5 are developed through essays, essay feedback and dissertation guidance and supervision.

In Politics and International Relations, these skills are developed through lectures, supervised small group discussions, seminar groups with a facilitator, oral presentations and, especially in Part Three, independent learning.

Feedback on an individual basis combined with the University's personal tutor system encourages constructive self-criticism.

Assessment

In English, all the subject-specific practical skills are assessed through formative and summative essays. 1 - 3 and 6 are also tested in unseen

Produce concise and accurate written reports
Critically discuss particular issues and arguments, and engage in discussion of each other's responses as well as articulate their own
Utilise problem-solving skills
Manage their own learning self-critically, reflect upon it, and seek and make use of feedback.

D. Transferable skills - able to:

Communicate fluently and effectively with a wide range of individuals using a wide range of means, including written and oral communication
Formulate and present arguments
Assess the merits of competing approaches
Translate subject-specific knowledge and skills into other environments
Find and use relevant information resources
Demonstrate time-management skills and prioritise workloads
Work independently, demonstrating initiative and self-organisation
Develop a creative approach to problem-solving in a variety of theoretical and more practical situations
Self-evaluate and self-reflect, with recognition of the steps required for improvement
Use information technology, especially word-processing, e-mail and the internet for the retrieval and presentation of information, including statistical or numerical data;
11. Analyse data
12. Exercise group and interpersonal skills
13. Develop vocational awareness with a view to planning a career.

examinations. In Politics and International Relations, assessment of 7-14 is carried on through coursework, written unseen examinations and seminar presentations.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

The skills are developed through seminar discussions, seminar presentations, essay writing, tutorial feedback and unseen examinations. 4 and 7 particularly are developed through requiring students to draw on acquired knowledge and skills when analysing new material in essays and unseen examinations. 5 and 10 are developed through use of the library and other sources of information for seminar preparation, essay writing, and research for the joint dissertation.

Most of these skills are embedded in all Politics and International Relations modules. The development of IT skills occurs throughout the programme and is especially apparent in modules where there is a research component. Independent learning is also developed throughout but becomes particularly important in Part Three of the programme. Vocational awareness is promoted especially by the CMS module.

Assessment

All the itemized skills are formatively assessed through coursework essays and seminar presentations, and summatively assessed through essays, unseen examinations, portfolios of work and the Joint Dissertation.

Please note - This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the module description and in the programme handbook. The University reserves the right to modify this specification in unforeseen circumstances, or where the process of academic development and feedback from students, quality assurance process or external sources, such as professional bodies, requires a change to be made. In such circumstances, a revised specification will be issued.
