Programme length: 3 years
Date of specification: April 2003

Summary of programme aims

The programme aims to provide a thorough degree level education in Classics. The syllabus aims to familiarise students with the ancient languages of Greek and Latin, as well as the literature, art, philosophy and history of Greek and Roman cultures and their reception and use in modern culture, whilst providing them with the opportunity to study more thematic topics in depth. The programme also provides for the development of the specific interests of students through independent study and specifically the dissertation. Students will expand the range, depth and sophistication of their knowledge of Classics through the structured progression of through Parts 1,2, and 3 of the programme.

Transferable skills

The University's Strategy for Teaching and Learning has identified a number of generic transferable skills which all students are expected to have developed by the end of their degree programme. In following this programme, students will have had the opportunity to enhance their skills relating to career management, communication (both written and oral), information handling, problem-solving, team working and use of information technology.

Programme content

Part 1 develops the student's knowledge of Latin and Greek with the option of the study of Graeco-Roman culture, with a particular emphasis upon the development of the study of primary sources and source criticism, alongside the development of writing skills to explore specific topics of Greek and Roman Civilisations. Students are encouraged to take an additional 20 credits in Greek and Roman Civilisations as well. Part 2 develops the student's knowledge of Latin and Greek language and literature and develops an awareness of the role of the classics in the shaping of the modern Western culture via compulsory core units, and includes also units to develop their academic capabilities (study skills, literary skills). In addition, students choose three option units that are either more thematic or add greater depth than the core units. In Part 3, there is an increasing specialisation and progression to approach topics in greater depth through the provision of optional units and the opportunity to research a dissertation topic in depth.

Not all options will necessarily be available every year. Admission to options will be at the discretion of the Programme Director.

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4,000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@IL) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Personal Tutors, the Careers Advisory Service, the University's Special Needs Advisor, Study Advisors, Hall Wardens and the Students' Union. The Department of Classics is the Curator of the Ure Museum of Greek Archaeology.

Career prospects

Graduates in Classics have found that their degree course has been a good basis for careers in management, administration, the civil service, commerce, law, publishing, librarianship and teaching. Graduates have also gone on to postgraduate courses within the field of the Classics at Reading and elsewhere.

Opportunities for study abroad or for placements

The Department of Classics is developing a Socrates exchange with the University of Aarhus, through which students can spend a period of study abroad (normally during Part 2).

Educational aims of the programme

The programme aims to provide a thorough degree level education in Classics. It aims to produce graduates in Classics with a good knowledge of Latin and Greek and who have experience of thematic and genre based approaches to the cultures of antiquity.
