Summary of programme aims

The programme aims to give students an appreciation of the normative, methodological and institutional issues involved in the study of international relations and strategic and conflict studies. Students encounter a variety of concepts, approaches and methods as they progress from introductory and survey modules to more specialist options involving greater independent study. They also acquire a number of generic intellectual and transferable skills that prepare them for the world of work.

Transferable skills

The University's Strategy for Teaching and Learning has identified a number of generic transferable skills which all students are expected to have developed by the end of their degree programme. In following this programme, students will have had the opportunity to enhance their skills relating to career management, communication (both written and oral), information handling, numeracy, problem-solving, team working and use of information technology

Programme content

Each part comprises 120 credits. In Part 1 Politics 1 (International Relations and International Relations) and at least one other Politics module must be taken, with the remaining credits from the third Politics module and/or from modules elsewhere in the University. In Part 2 students must take 60 credits from the compulsory core modules and 30 credits from other core modules, as well as the compulsory 10 credit Study of Politics module and a 20 credit option. In Part 3 students must take 60 credits of compulsory modules and 60 credits of optional modules. In Parts 2 and 3 (and/or 4) up to 20 credits can be modules available elsewhere in the University.

Progression requirements

To proceed to Part 2 students must

- obtain at least 40% in each of the Politics modules taken;
- achieve an overall average of 40% in 120 credits taken in the examination;
- achieve not less than 30% in any non-Politics module except that a mark of less than 30% in a total of 20 credits may be condoned, provided that the candidate has pursued the course for the module(s) with reasonable diligence and has not been absent from the examination without reasonable cause.

To proceed to Part 3 students must

- obtain at least 35% in each of the Politics modules taken;
- achieve an overall average of 40% in 120 credits taken in the examination;
- achieve not less than 30% in any non-Politics module except that a mark of less than 30% in a total of 20 credits may be condoned, provided that the candidate has pursued the course for the module(s) with reasonable diligence and has not been absent from the examination without reasonable cause.

Summary of teaching and assessment

Part 1 modules and the compulsory Part 2 modules involve both lectures and seminars. Part 2 and 3 optional modules typically place greater emphasis on seminars. All modules other than the Study of Politics, Career Management Skills and Dissertation are assessed by a mixture of coursework (25%) and examination (75%). The conventions for classification are included in the Department Handbook, but you should note that weighting between Part 2 and Part 3 for classification purposes is 33% and 67%.

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4,000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@IL) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Personal Tutors, the Careers Advisory Service, the University's Special Needs Advisor, Study Advisors, Hall Wardens and the Students' Union.

Students are provided with Department Handbooks which outline the programme, provide guidance on study skills, and contain information on staff, facilities and specialised sources of help within the University. Additional support is given in the study of Politics module in Part 2. There is also written feedback on essay work. There is also a departmental Library, and a photocopier. Support for students in their studies is provided through the University's Personal Academic Record (PAR) scheme, in which students meet their personal tutors regularly to review their progress.

Career prospects

A degree in War, Peace and International Relations may be advantageous for students intending a career in the armed forces or the foreign services. It can lead to a wide range of jobs, such as the public services (civil service, local government, public corporations, hospital management, etc), the social services (child care, youth employment, probation, etc), advertising, journalism, radio and television, management traineeships in industry, professions such as accountancy and law (barristers and solicitors alike), banking and insurance, and various research agencies. Students are given specific vocational training and orientation through a second year Career Management Skills module run in conjunction with the Careers Advisory Service..

Opportunities for study abroad or for placements

Students may choose to spend part of their second year studying at a University in another European country, via the Socrates programme, or in the United States, via the American Studies exchange programme. While such exchanges may involve some additional financial expenditures and some adjustments to coursework at Reading, the Department believes these exchanges offer an excellent opportunity to broaden educational and life experience. In the first instance interested students see their personal tutor.

Educational aims of the programme

The programme aims to provide a thorough degree level education in Politics and International Relations. It aims to produce graduates who have experience of the main sub-fields of the discipline and have acquired appropriate study skills.
