ABSTRACT

The ChiliProject is a part of Redmine, both which enable the management of a project so that it can be successful. The ideologies and methods used to do this can also be practical for educational learning. There has been research into some of the key concepts from Software Engineering, e.g. agile development, and Social Networking, e.g. communication, that have been used in this project to create a learning environment for students in which they are able to communicate with each other to gain further understanding in the subject that they are studying.
