Using compassion-focused CBT to work with Complex PTSD

A workshop exploring therapeutic ways to work with the effects of interpersonal trauma and shame

Introduction:

This workshop will present a treatment programme to work with Complex PTSD and shame using a compassion focused approach to enhance evidence-based practice informed by CBT.

Those who have been repeatedly traumatised at the hands of others have many challenges to face as they discover how to live a life without trauma and learn how to live in a mind that can flourish. Predominant issues of self-blame, self-loathing, lack of trust, interpersonal difficulties, struggles to regulate threat-based emotions, flashbacks, avoidance and disconnection are prevalent issues to be addressed in therapy. These difficulties are often described as Complex PTSD.

Recent expert consensus (published by the UK Psychological Trauma Society, 2017) recommends Compassion Focused Therapy as part of a phased treatment approach for Complex PTSD and this workshop will explore how to use CFT to develop compassionate resilience as part of this phased based approach. Compassionate resilience can enhance the capacity to self-soothe in those who feel deeply shamed about who they are and what they have been through. Being able to access caring compassionate mind states can enhance engagement and provide a safe framework to work directly with trauma narratives and flashbacks.

Compassion focused therapy was developed by Professor Paul Gilbert (2005, 2009). The explicit goal is to develop, access and stimulate positive affect associated with self-soothing in the mind and body of the patient in order to promote an inner sense of psychological safeness (Gilbert, 2005).

Learning objectives:

- To learn key theoretical principles of Compassion focused therapy
- To learn how to develop a compassionate trauma narrative.
- To learn ways to work directly with shame-based trauma memories using the compassionate soothing system and other evidenced based practices such as hotspots updates, EMDR interweaves and imagery rescripting.
- To learn ways to develop compassionate values to help flourishing.
