Contents

Table of contents..............................................................................................................................................1

Theodoros Marinis and Vesna Stojanovik
Acknowledgments..............................................................................................................................................3

Asya Achimova..................................................................................................................................................4
Verb Innovations in Spontaneous Speech of Children

Theodora Alexopoulou, Teresa Parodi and Elina Vilar-Beltrán.................................................................15
Variables and Resumption in Child Spanish

Sharon Armon-Lotem, Galit Adam and Joel Walters. .......................................................................................26
Verb Inflections as Indicators of Bilingual SLI

Aleka Akoyunoglou Blackwell and Collin Olson ............................................................................................38
The Nature of Nominals Modified by Adjectives in the Input

Emma Healey and Barbora Skarabela............................................................................................................49
Are Children Willing to Accept Two Labels for a Single Object?: A Comparative Study of Mutual Exclusivity in Monolingual and Bilingual Children

Miao-Ling Hsieh ..............................................................................................................................................59
A Longitudinal Study of a Chinese-Speaking Child: Some Empirical Discoveries and their Theoretical Implications

Jacqueline van Kampen ................................................................................................................................67
Anaphoric Pronouns for Topic Devices: Theoretical Claims and Acquisitional Evidence

Eiko Kato-Otani ...............................................................................................................................................76
Writing Development of A Bilingual Child: Japanese and English

Evi Kyritsi, Deborah James and Susan Edwards .............................................................................................84
Phonological Awareness, Letter-Sound Knowledge and Word Recognition in Greek Deaf Children

Yi-An Lin...........................................................................................................................................................95
Against Hegarty’s Feature-Based Theory on the Grammar of Children with Specific Language Impairment

Soile Loukusa, Eeva Leinonen and Nuala Ryder ............................................................................................102
Development of Answers and Explanations to Contextually Demanding Questions: A Study of Three- to Nine-year-old Finnish Children
Emily Mather and Kim Plunkett .............................................................................. 110

Mutual Exclusivity in the Intermodal Preferential Looking Paradigm

Kate Noonan, Edith L. Bavin, Ben Ong and David Grayden ....................... 114

The Relationship between Frequency Discrimination Skills and Language Development in 5-7 Year Olds

Eirini Sanoudaki ................................................................................................. 125

Word Initial Clusters in Acquisition

Matthew Saxton, Julie Dockrell, Eleri Bevan and Jo van Herwegen ............. 136

Grammaticality Judgements of Children with and without Language Delay

Nafsika Smith, Susan Edwards, Vesna Stojanovik, and Spyridoula Varlokosta ................................................................. 151

Object Clitics, Definite Articles and Genitive Possessive Clitics in Greek Specific Language Impairment (SLI): Deficits and Explanations

Anja K. Steinlen and Nina Rogotzki ................................................................. 163

Comprehension of L2 grammar in a Bilingual Preschool: A Developmental Perspective

Barbara Stumper and Gisela Szagun.................................................................. 174

The Acquisition of Verb-argument Structure in German-speaking Children

Gisela Szagun ...................................................................................................... 183

The Younger the Better? Variability in Language Development of Young German-speaking Children with Cochlear Implants

Katherine Thatcher, Holly Branigan, Janet McLean and Antonella Sorace .... 195

Children’s Early Acquisition of the Passive: Evidence from Syntactic Priming

Jill Titterington ..................................................................................................... 206

Prosodic Phonology and Atypical Spoken Language Acquisition in Children who are Hearing Impaired

Jodi Tommerdahl and Christel de Bruijn ........................................................... 217

Is One Language Sample Enough in Morphosyntactic Analysis?

Chongying Wang and Ann Dowker .................................................................. 226

Interpretation of Animal Metaphors: Evidence from Chinese and English Children and Adults