This mature row of Yews includes a gold form and was likely to have been part of formal garden; rows of mature Hornbeam (Carpinus betulus) providing further evidence. Yew as a species is well represented on campus many of the maturing trees growing out from their original formal planting of hedges and shaped trees.