

Typology for Academic Partnerships

[For guidance on the typology for delivery with a partner relating to;

Placements – contact the Placement and Development Manager

Study Aboard and Erasmus – contact the Erasmus and Study Abroad Manager

Non-credit bearing, non-award provision – contact Research and Enterprise)

The purpose of this typology is to provide colleagues interested in setting up a partnership with a range of examples of the types of teaching collaboration available. In many cases a partnerships may not fit neatly into one category and may span several categories. To discuss further any elements or explore models not included in the typology, please contact the Partnerships Team at partnerships@reading.ac.uk

Type	Design	Delivery	Award	Description
Joint	Joint	Joint	Joint (one award)	A single award programme designed and delivered by two or more institutions. Policies and procedures are agreed jointly by all partners for the specific programme. Responsibility for quality assurance is shared.
Dual	Both (with variability on % designed) Design may be based on existing programmes at both the University and the partner with adaptation in design to create one programme.	Both (with variability on % delivered)	Dual (two awards)	Students study one programme, spending time at and the partner, and perhaps the University, leading to an award from both institutions. Each award is dependent on the other. Each partner is responsible for its own assessment and quality assurance in accordance with the agreement between the partners.
Validation	Partner	Partner	University	Students study part or all of a programme at a partner which leads to a University degree. The University validates the portion of the programme designed and delivered by the partner. The University retains responsibility for quality assurance including appointment of external examiners as well as monitoring and review exercise.

Franchise	University	Both	University	The University designs a programme which is wholly or partly delivered with a partner off campus. The University retains responsibility for assessment and quality assurance.
Off-campus Delivery	University	University	University	A programme is designed by the University and delivered with the support of a partner. Normally facilities and academic support are provided by the partner.
Progression	Each partner responsible for their own programme (with variability on % of overall programme designed)	Each partner responsible for their own programme (with variability on % of overall programme delivered)	University	The University directly admits students to an advanced point on a specific University degree programme after a period of study on a particular programme at the Partner Institution. Students have the right to apply to the University and on successful admittance, credits earned at the partner are recognised as suitable content for advanced admission. Students undergo the standard University admissions process and are admitted based on requirements outlined in the agreement between partners. These admission requirements are based on curriculum mapping. (This is effectively a formal arrangement for the recognition of prior learning.)

Articulation	Each partner responsible for their own programme (with variability on % designed)	Each partner responsible for their own programme (with variability on % delivered)	University	The University directly admits students to an advanced point on a specific University degree programme after a period of study on a specified programme at the Partner Institution. Students are entitled to automatically transfer onto the advanced stage of the degree on reaching outlined transfer requirements. These transfer requirements are outlined in the agreement between partners and are based on curriculum mapping. This mapping exercise identifies that the content taught at the partner provides an appropriate basis on which students may enter a University programme at a particular level. These arrangements involve credit accumulation and transfer, so that credit achieved at the partner is transferred to contribute to the programme and award completed at the University. The two separate components are the responsibility of the respective organisations delivering them but, together, contribute to a single award (of the degree-awarding body).

Type	Design	Delivery	Award	Description
Specified Articulation	Partner (for portion of the programme as specified in the programme specification)	Partner (for portion of the programme as specified in the programme specification)	University	Students study part of a programme at a partner which leads to a University degree. The University recognises the portion of the programme designed and delivered by the partner. The University identifies that the portion taught by the partner is at an appropriate level and covers appropriate learning outcomes so as to articulate to the named University programme. The specified elements of the programme taught at the partner are outlined in the Programme Specification. The University retains overall responsibility for quality assurance of the programme.
4+1 Recruitment	Each institution is responsible for design of its own programme which remains independent from the partner's programme. Design is based on existing programmes.	Each institution is responsible for delivery of its own programme which remains independent from the partner's programme.	Both – each institution awards for its own programme.	Students undertaken a specified undergraduate degree at the partner and on reaching a required threshold, are supported in applying for a specified University Masters programme. Students undergo the standard University admissions process.

Double Masters	Both – each institution is responsible for design of its own programme. Design is based on existing programmes.	Both – each institution is responsible for delivery of its own programme.	Two – the University award remains independent and the partner counts the credit of the University degree towards the partner award.	Students study for and are awarded a Masters from the University. The credits achieved in this award are recognised at a partner institution and after a period of further study at the partner, students are also awarded a Masters from the partner institution. Students can either start at the partner or at the University.
