Unless it is a compulsory part of the course, Study Abroad is an option that students may choose to apply for, but it is a competitive process. The number of places available at partner institutions can vary year-on-year. While efforts are made to secure sufficient places at partner institutions to meet demand, the University cannot guarantee every applicant the possibility to study abroad or that it will be possible to study abroad at a particular institution or in a particular country. Partner institutions referenced on the Study Abroad website are correct at the time of publication.

<sup>1</sup> Students who request to Study Abroad for a full academic year when their degree has a term / semester option available will receive a lower priority for places than students who choose the term / semester option, particularly with university-wide partners.
