Summary of programme aims

The programme aims to provide graduate students with a thorough grounding in contemporary approaches to key aspects of the interpretation and reception of Classical culture, both ancient and modern, and to equip them with the tools for further research by developing their critical and conceptual understanding. The provision is multidisciplinary, combining literary, historical, artistic and archaeological approaches. A wide choice of pathways is possible to allow students to follow their individual preferences in terms both of disciplinary approach and of period. Independent study is promoted and teaching is geared towards the individual development of students both in the teaching of specialist modules and through the supervised dissertation. Students are also expected to take a course in an ancient or modern language, at an appropriate level including beginners'.

Transferable skills

In addition to providing a grounding for further research, the programme aims to enhance students' personal and interpersonal skills, in particular, to promote the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility; to develop the ability to make decisions and to communicate effectively as both communicator and recipient; and to encourage the faculty of independent learning with a view to adaptability in employment, continuing professional development and life-enhancement.

Programme content

All students take a Research Methods module (10 credits) which covers key skills in an intensive week of workshops. A module titled 'Approaches to the Classical Tradition' (30 credits) run in the first term provides students with both a historical overview and a theoretical grounding via a series of in-depth case studies. Students will also take a language module (20 credits), studying Ancient Greek or Latin in the Department at an appropriate level or alternatively a modern language offered through the IWLP. In the second term of the academic year, students take a Special Options module (30 credits), which involves the study of three options. A 20,000-word dissertation (90 credits) is also required.

Summary of teaching and assessment

All the modules are delivered through small group teaching. Non-linguistic modules are assessed through written assignments. The Research Methods module is assessed through a short written assignment. The Classical Tradition module is assessed through a book review, an oral or web presentation, and one 2500 word essay. The Special Options module is assessed by EITHER three 2,500 word essays, one per option, OR one 2,500 essay and one 5,000 essay on two different options. Language modules are assessed by a combination of written assignments and examination. For the Dissertation, students work with a Supervisor on an individual basis.

The University's taught postgraduate marks classification is as follows:

Mark	Interpretation
70 – 100%	Distinction
60 – 69%	Merit
50 – 59%	Good standard (Pass)
Failing categories
40 – 49%	Work below threshold standard
0 – 39%	Unsatisfactory Work

For Masters Degrees

To pass the Masters, the students must gain an average mark of 50 or more overall and have no mark below 40 in Approaches and Dissertation. In addition the total credit value of all modules marked below 40 must not exceed 30 credits and for all modules marked below 50 must be less than 60 credits.

Students who gain an average mark of 70 or more overall including a mark of 60 or more for the dissertation and have no mark below 40 will be eligible for a Distinction. Those gaining an average mark of 60 or more overall including a mark of 50 or more for the dissertation and have no mark below 40 will be eligible for a Merit

For Postgraduate Diplomas

To pass the Postgraduate Diploma students must gain an average mark of 50 or more. In addition the total credit value of all modules marked below 40 must not exceed 30 credits and for all modules marked below 50 must be less than 60 credits.*

Students who gain an average mark of 70 or more and have no mark below 40 will be eligible for the award of a Distinction. Those gaining an average mark of 60 or more and have no mark below 40 will be awarded a Merit.

For Postgraduate Certificates

To pass the Postgraduate Certificate students must gain an average mark of 50 or more. In addition the total credit value of all modules marked below 40 must not exceed 10 credits.*

*The provision to permit a candidate to be passed overall with a profile containing marks below 40 is made subject to the condition that there is evidence that the candidate applied himself or herself to the work of those modules with reasonable diligence and has not been absent from the examination without reasonable cause.

Admission requirements

Entrants to this programme must have a good BA degree (normally of at least II.1 standard) or an equivalent qualification.

Overseas students are also required to fulfil the University standards of English language proficiency.

Support for students and their learning

The Department has a strong research record and a thriving community of postgraduate students. Discussion and interchange of ideas among staff and postgraduate students is fostered through the Departmental research seminars, which include regular contributions from international guest speakers. The Department has its own specialised library and a 'Resource Room' with a variety of electronic resources for the use of postgraduates.

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4,000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@IL) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. The University Library has good holdings on reception and the classical tradition, and students will also be able to make use of specialist facilities offered by major research libraries and museums and galleries in London, only half-an-hour away by train, and those in Oxford. There are language laboratory facilities for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Programme Directors, the Careers Advisory Service, the University's Special Needs Advisor, Study Advisors, Hall Wardens and the Students' Union.

Career prospects

This course equips students for further research, typically of a doctoral level. At the same time, when taken as an opportunity for further study, this degree will enhance the prospects of graduates in those diverse fields which Classicists are well-equipped to enter: administration, management, the civil service, law, accounting, publishing, museum work, teaching.

Educational aims of the programme

The programme aims to provide graduate students with a thorough grounding in contemporary approaches to the study of the reception and legacy of Classical Civilisation understood in their widest sense. In particular, it aims to develop a systematic approach to the acquisition of knowledge together with a critical awareness of current issues of debate and the ability to evaluate and develop appropriate conceptual frameworks. In addition it aims to prepare them for study at MPhil and PhD level by equipping them with the tools necessary for further independent research.

Programme Outcomes

Knowledge and Understanding

A. Knowledge and understanding of: <ul style="list-style-type: none">▶ a broad spectrum of interpretations of classical culture approached through selected aspects and topics▶ specific areas and topics of the student's choice, researched in depth▶ key issues of contemporary debate and scholarly enquiry▶ a range of current critical approaches and methodologies▶ a range of research techniques drawn from different areas at a theoretical and a practical level of application▶ specific linguistic and/or palaeographic skills	Teaching/learning methods and strategies Knowledge and understanding are gained through instruction and discussion in a classroom setting; visits to museums, galleries or theatres; through informal activities such as attendance at Department lecture and seminar series or at conferences and colloquia in Reading and outside; through guided independent reading, enquiry and research; and through the assessed elements of the programme – essays, presentations and the dissertation. Assessment Knowledge and understanding are assessed through a range of written assignments; through language tests and examinations; through individual presentations; and through the dissertation.

- ▶ present material orally in a clear, effective and persuasive manner
- ▶ act autonomously in planning, timing and implementing tasks
- ▶ work constructively and adaptably with others
- ▶ display the independent learning ability required for continuing professional development

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

Transferable skills are acquired through participation in seminars, attendance at lectures and seminars with internal and external speakers, and applied in self-study and the writing of assignments

Assessment

Transferable skills are assessed through all the assessment processes built into the programme. Oral communication is assessed in the presentation. Planning skills are an intrinsic part of the delivery of long essays to time throughout the course and of the development and production of one extended piece of work, the Dissertation.

Please note - This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the module description and in the programme handbook. The University reserves the right to modify this specification in unforeseen circumstances, or where the process of academic development and feedback from students, quality assurance processes or external sources, such as professional bodies, requires a change to be made. In such circumstances, a revised specification will be issued.
